

Matthew Gillian, born in upstate New York and raised in Fresno to two hard working parents. Matthew attended college in New York City and Los Angeles County. After completing his education in business at Cal State University Northridge, Matthew ventured into the music industry in Los Angeles immersing himself in the diverse fast paced culture of the city. He soon felt a strong pull back to his roots, realizing that the values instilled in him were deeply rooted in Fresno. Returning to his hometown, Matthew reconnected with the community that had always held a special place in his heart. He supported his father through the difficult ordeal of dialysis and a kidney transplant. This experience strengthened Matthew's resolve, pushing him to advocate for improved healthcare access. The experience of transporting his father to dialysis appointments while witnessing the birth of his son were pivotal moments in his life. It was through these personal experiences that he recognized the need to establish a non-profit organization that leverages electric vehicles for social service transportation. Matthew's love for his family has fueled his drive to advocate for comprehensive healthcare policies that prioritize the needs of every individual in the Fresno community. Matthew Gillian's story is one of personal growth and unwavering commitment to Fresno. His profound experiences, from childhood to adulthood, have shaped his perspective and molded him into a candidate who truly understands the needs and aspirations of the community. With a focus on compassionate leadership and effective advocacy, Matthew is poised to make a significant positive impact on the lives of Fresno residents. Working tirelessly to create needed change for the place he proudly calls home.
